Foreword

If Season One was about finding our footing in a new world, Season Two was about finding out just how wide and wild that world could be—and how every single road, highway, and flight still leads straight back to the person waiting at the end of the day.

From the sunlit asphalt of the Pacific Coast Highway down to San Diego, up into the misty redwood groves of Big Sur, beneath the historic chandeliers of The Fillmore in San Francisco, and through rainy record shops in Seattle… we carried our notebooks, our battered Telecasters, and each other.

And then came the flight back across the Atlantic—landing into the fierce salty gales of Mount's Bay, lighting the woodstove fire at Carn Lowen with Leah, and sharing quiet honey tea beneath the apple trees at Trevenna House in Constantine.

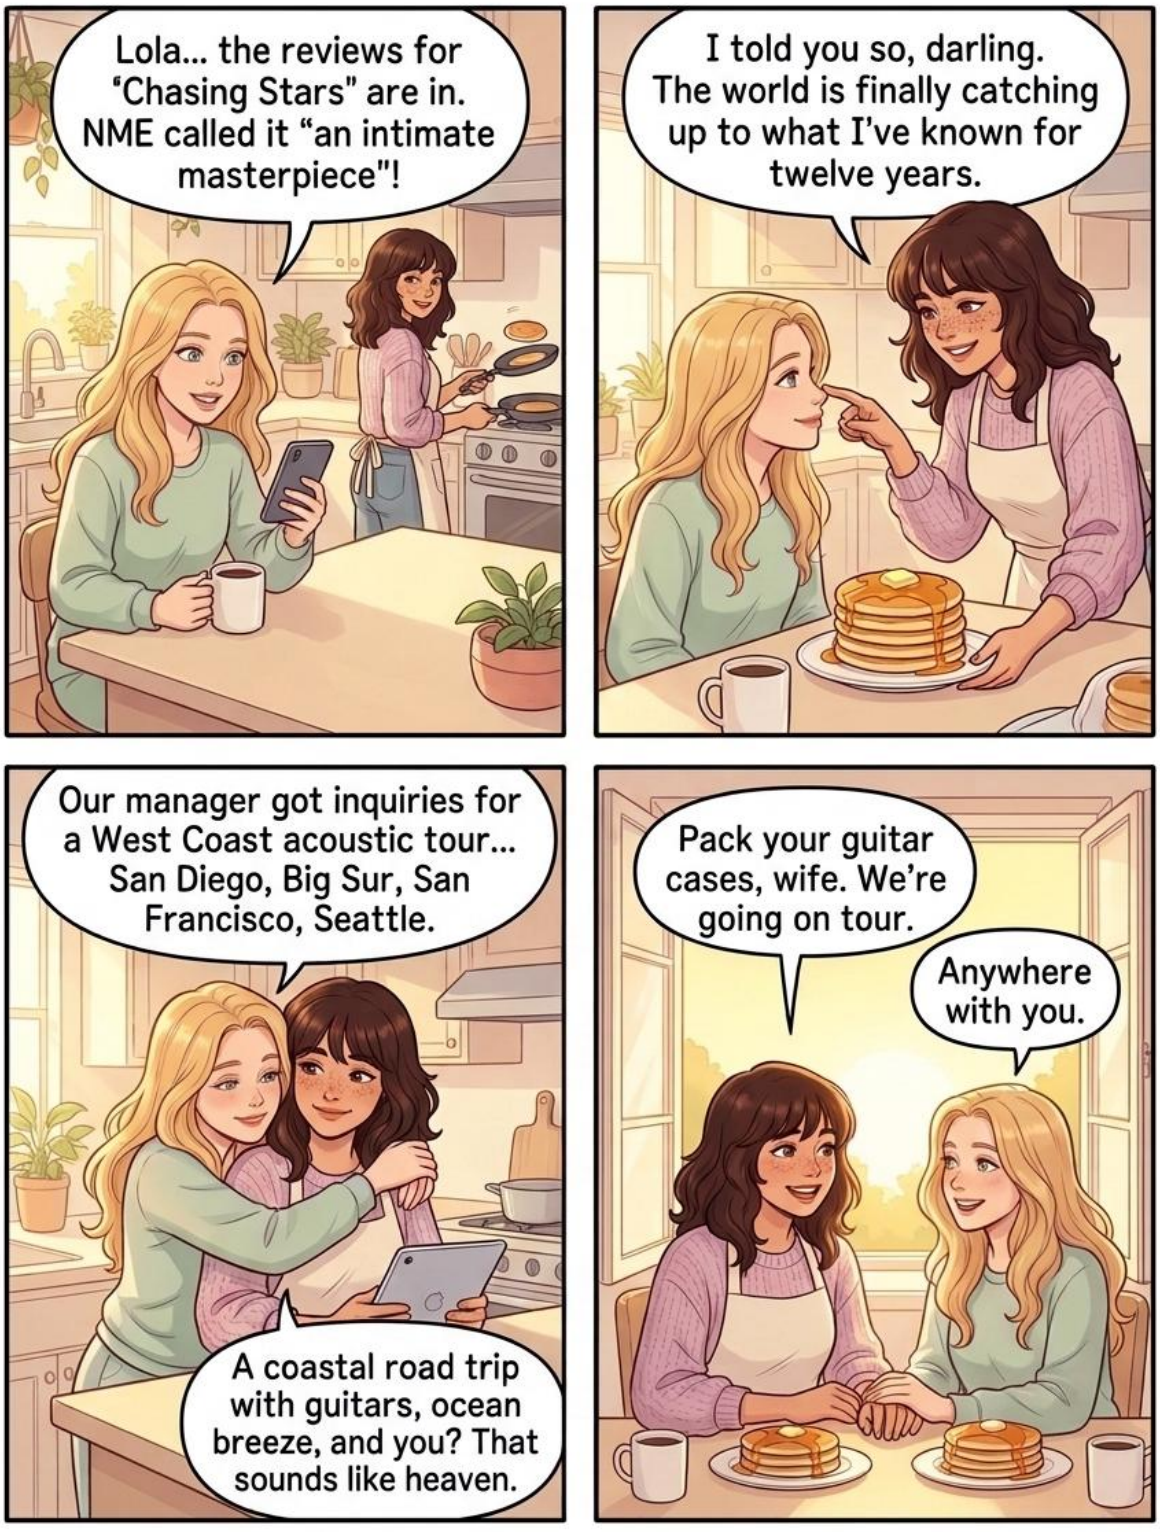

These ten comic strips are my personal visual diary of that journey. They are tender, romantic, silly, and sacred. Thank you for listening to the songs, reading the strips, and being part of our quiet revolution.

With all my love and all my chords,

Kayleigh Merez (and Lola Beatrice Merez)
